

PWA – Why is this organization needed?

Harassment in the professional world, per our independent research firm, is pervasive in the work place. Frequently the harassment goes under or unreported because no one is measuring it and is often a part of corporate culture “don’t ask don’t tell” tolerated at many levels of management. Many professionals, managers and executives fear personal consequences when reporting this type of behavior to internal HR departments or direct supervisors (including management). They fear consequences that can include: exclusion from key decisions, loss of face with peers and others, loss of self respect, peer isolation, may impact promotion opportunities, forced resignation and in the most extreme cases straight out unfair termination. Prowomen.org provides an anonymous and non-legal alternative to help professionals prevent these devastating consequences.

M. Sandi Aigoro

Founder, President & CEO

Sandi Aigoro is an outstanding visionary with a passion for people and culture. Currently the President and Chief Executive of Hunter Chatman Communications, Incorporated and founder of Professional Women’s Anonymous, she leveraged her career in telecommunications telephony and high-technology to perform miracles with transformation projects including quality assurance, organizational change, network engineering, project management, business development and human performance. She excelled in global business and delivered new initiative products and services in global markets. She is an experienced executive, consulting with multinational corporations including AT&T, Concert Global Networks, Cingular, Verizon Wireless and Accenture.

Ms Aigoro also helped set up and launch HC Communications (www.hccommunications.com), a business and strategy consulting firm, and Professional Women’s Anonymous (www.ProWomen.org), a powerful tax-exempt corporation to support professionals that experience workplace harassment. Additionally, throughout her career, Ms. Aigoro has been leading committees and leveraging her professional experience with volunteerism for various organizations supporting women and children. As a mother of five, she has broken many barriers for women and minorities.

Ms. Aigoro’s outstanding accomplishments earned her a Bachelor of Arts from National-Louis University in Behavioral Science, an M.B.A. in International Business from Mercer University, and a Master’s Certificate in Project Management from George Washington University.
